The Courses

Financial Management

The financial management course is an examination of topics in general and corporate finance. Topics covered will include, but are not limited to, time value of money, asset valuation, risk and return, and risk management. We will examine valuation of equities, bonds, projects, and entire firms. Risk management topics will include commodity/financial futures and options.

Instructor: Mark K. Smith, Ph.D., MBA, Lecturer of Finance, Department of Finance, University of Illinois College of Business

Accounting Theory – Special Topics

This course introduces students to the role of accounting information as a tool used by decision makers for resource allocation and as a tool used by the firm internally to coordinate and control its broader organizational units. Within a small business context, students will develop a deeper appreciation for the qualities of useful information, the business environment in which financial reporting decisions are made, and the risks which threaten the achievement of organizational objectives.

Instructor: Julia Shapland, Lecturer of Accountancy and Director of Accountancy Internship Program for the University of Illinois

Entrepreneurship

The goal of this course is to learn to use financial statements as tools to help manage a business, to learn some of the contemporary methods of financing small businesses, their attendant costs and benefits, to gain some understanding about the business environment and its effects on owner-managers of businesses, to gain an understanding of the problems of start-up ventures, and to learn different approaches to the valuation of businesses. The student is expected to assume the role and attitude of the owner-manager of a business.

Instructor: George Krueger, CEO of Bigg Success and Lecturer, Department of Finance, University of Illinois College of Business
